WINS DAMAGE SUIT.

Verdict of $2,475 For Draijevic
Against Champion Mining Co.

The jury in the case of John Draijevic against the Champion Copper company returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $2,475 after deliberating five hours yesterday afternoon. The case was summed up and given to the jury yesterday about noon and the verdict was not returned until nearly 5 o'clock.

Draijevic was suing the company for damages sustained by him while he was working underground in the mine nearly a year ago. He was hit on the head and suffered a fractured skull by a fall of rock. The skull was so badly broken that parts of it had to be removed, leaving him without any protection on the top of his head and so affecting his nervous system that he has been unable to do hard work since that time. He claims to be affected with dizzy spells and asked for damages for his injuries.

A. W. Neer and A. T. Streeter appeared for the plaintiff and A. P. Rees and L. L. Robinson for the company.

Ejection Suit in Court.

After the Draijevic case had gone to the jury, the court took up the consideration of the case of the Sheldon estate against J. F. Dillon an election suit. The Sheldon estate is suing Mr. Dillon for the title to the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section 12-54-31, which Mr. Dillon claims under a tax title purchased in 1906. Mr. Dillon was on the stand this morning under cross-examination by Mr. Ross as to the subsequent payment of taxes, the company claiming that the failure of Mr. Dillon to pay his taxes caused him to lose his title to the land.
